BIDDY, NOT DELIA.

Mrs. Murray's Declaration to Her A Man and Two Women Dispute the Daughter in Police Court. irs. Catharine Murray, fifty-nine years at, of 378 Hooper street, Williamsburg, reated a scene in the Lee Avenue Court this sorning. She was arrested on complaint of that her mother was in the habit of calling her vile names.

As soon as the charge was made in court of a ring which Mrs. Gray wore on her finge.

They were quarrelling over the ownerso ogether and said, poking her fist under her artled daughter's nose: "Della, indeed! It's high-toned you want to be! Your name is Biddy, and it's me that to be! Your name is Biddy, and it's me that toget to know it, seeing as I am your mother. I hever called you out of your name, but you're ashamed of your poor, old mother, Biddy. I'n not call you Delia if I have to say in jail all me il.e. Delia, indeed!"

Mrs. Murray was pu! under bonds to keep the peace.
